

WIGAN AGREED SYLLABUS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION 2017

Letter from the Director of Children and Families

Dear Colleague,

Religious Education makes a significant contribution to a student's spiritual, moral, social and cultural development. Therefore, the need for a high quality syllabus is vital.

This new Wigan agreed syllabus is exactly that – a high quality resource to assist in delivery that is relevant to young people across the Borough. It is a practical syllabus written for and by Wigan teachers using as its inspiration the original Wigan agreed syllabus and a syllabus devised by Wiltshire Council. The syllabus offers schools and other settings a range of guidance, advice and materials to make the curriculum come alive. It is also important that children understand what others believe, in order to live in peace alongside each other.

My thanks go to the teachers who have worked tirelessly to devise the syllabus.

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus

Introduction

The changes in education policy in recent years have had a significant impact on Religious Education. As a result, there have been substantial changes made to the Wigan Agreed Syllabus. These changes have been required to enable the syllabus to meet these demands.

The new syllabus has an enquiry-based approach to learning. It focuses on improving standards of religious literacy and has an academic rigour that will equip pupils with the knowledge and skills to engage with religious issues and worldviews.

Pupils leaving school should have a sound knowledge and understanding of a variety of religious traditions and cultures. They will be able to discuss in detail, religious beliefs, moral issues and ultimate questions. They should be fully aware of their own and other people's viewpoints both religious and secular, and have the skills to listen with empathy and understanding to the views of others. The knowledge and understanding gained will prepare pupils for life in modern Britain and give them an understanding of events both national and global. The changes to the syllabus will ensure good quality, creative and academically challenging Religious Education is delivered in Wigan schools.

There will be a wide range of resources to support the delivery of the new syllabus. These will include teaching and learning resources, relevant documentation and exemplars of good practice.

There has been a comprehensive consultation process involved in the production of the syllabus, with extensive consultation of teachers through the Wigan Agreed Syllabus conferences and the Wigan RE Network. The consultation revealed that primary school teachers felt they needed greater support in the delivery of the syllabus and a more workable structure. Secondary school teachers liked the breadth of study within the existing syllabus but felt that it needed to be more challenging, particularly in light of the new GCSE specifications.

The key stage 3 section of the syllabus had the structure for making it an ideal platform for further study of the subject at examination level. There were opportunities within the syllabus to study a religious tradition in depth and it did reflect the structure of the new GCSE syllabi. The breadth of study will therefore remain the same but the level of challenge is increased to give a solid foundation for further study.

EYFS, key stages 1 & 2 were to prove more of a challenge. The consensus was that significant changes should be made to the content and the breadth of study to ensure that the pupils had the necessary knowledge, understanding and skills to access the subject at key stage 3 and examination level. The Wiltshire Agreed Syllabus and the resources available provided the inspiration for the development of the new syllabus. We therefore acknowledge this support in enabling Wigan teachers to write and develop a new syllabus, which builds on the good practice already in place in Wigan schools. It increases challenge, whilst providing greater academic rigour and breadth of study. The syllabus takes into account all the new developments in RE nationally. There is now clear progression in terms of both subject knowledge and skills across all key stages and there is a cohesive structure and format to the syllabus, which provides a solid foundation for measuring progress.

Recommendations contained in the documentation listed, have also been instrumental in directing the focus of the new syllabus. These documents are the RE Review 2013; RE: realising potential (Ofsted 2013); the National Curriculum and the new GCSE changes, have all contributed to the development of the new Wigan Agreed Syllabus for RE.

Overview of the Wigan Agreed Syllabus

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus:

Clarifies the purpose and value of the subject:

There are clear explanations as to the aims and purpose of RE in terms of its place in the educational curriculum of the 21st century. Its impact on pupils in terms of their personal and educational development and wider value enables pupils to engage with religious issues and worldviews. The focus of the syllabus will continue to be Christianity in line with government guidelines, but schools are expected to enquire into and explore the beliefs and practices of other religious traditions represented locally, nationally and globally. They are also expected to enquire into and consider non-religious perspectives and worldviews in the course of their studies.

Meets the new educational standards laid out by the National Curriculum:

It enables greater parity with other subjects, whilst retaining its distinctive contribution and identity. The format of the Wigan Agreed Syllabus reflects the format of other subjects included in the National Curriculum. The syllabus gives an overview of what is to be delivered at each key stage. A more detailed copy of the units is included to give further guidance on the programmes of study. These should be used to produce workable schemes of work for use in schools.

The contribution of RE to literacy development:

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus makes a significant contribution to the development of literacy skills. It promotes the development of questioning, discussion, critical thinking skills, reading, language, writing, reasoning and evaluative skills, all of which contribute to this area of learning. The expectations in respect of pupil progress in the National Curriculum with regards to English and Literacy, should be reflected in the expectations of pupil progress in the RE curriculum at each key stage.

The development of subject knowledge and religious literacy:

There is greater emphasis on the development of subject knowledge and religious literacy. This involves pupils using a wide variety of religious vocabulary and concepts and being able to explain use and apply them with accuracy and in context. It involves the development of discussion and debating skills, using key arguments and teachings from religion and belief. It develops critical thinking and reasoning, demonstrating insight into religious and non-religious concepts and ideas. It also involves analysis and evaluation of arguments and teachings from and about religion and belief.

Secular and worldviews:

Schools are expected to enquire into and explore the beliefs and practices of other religious traditions and also to consider secular viewpoints and beliefs, relating to the content of the RE syllabus. The RE community has always referred to non-religious beliefs in their programmes of study to ensure that all views and opinions are represented and considered. This contributes to the open exploration of faith, moral issues and ultimate questions that the RE curriculum supports.

In the Wigan RE Syllabus, references to non-religious beliefs are referred to as secular, worldviews or views from 'religion and belief'. There may also be specific references where appropriate to Humanism and Atheism.

New GCSE expectations:

The increase in the breadth and depth of study across all key stages lays a firm foundation for the study of the subject at examination level. It also enables the systematic study of religion alongside the thematic study

British Values:

In the current inspection framework and in the National Curriculum, there is increasing reference to British values. These shared universal values are reflected and developed in the education, learning and the personal development of pupils. In this respect, Religious Education makes a significant and visible contribution.

It encourages respectful attitudes to people of different faith communities and people who share different opinions and views of life, both religious and secular. It enables pupils to learn about other people and their lifestyles, and develops an understanding that informs and encourages acceptance of difference and respect for it. It celebrates diversity within British society and within faith communities and cultures represented locally, nationally and globally. Pupils in RE, visit, learn about and engage with different religious and secular communities and cultures that are represented in the UK and learn to value this diversity within British society. The whole approach of RE in this respect is one of tolerance, not just of other cultures and faith communities but also of people who choose different lifestyles. It reflects and encourages freedom of speech and freedom of religious expression that are valued in British society. RE reflects the democratic process through discussions and debates, where consideration is given to the views of others. Religion and state, and the relationship between the two in British society is part of the RE curriculum. RE engages with the rule of law and its impact on moral dilemmas and the challenges faced by society today. It looks at religious and moral codes for living, many of which are reflected in the laws of the UK. The RE curriculum also reflects the charitable nature of British society and its concern and support for others who are less fortunate. It contributes significantly to awareness of life in modern Britain.

Assessment

There is also new guidance on assessment in RE and it is expected that the progress of pupils at each key stage should be in line with the expectations outlined in the National Curriculum. The new syllabus combines the two attainment targets in RE, 'Learning about religion' and 'Learning from religion', enabling more focused assessment. The syllabus also addresses the issue of measuring progress in RE in the new educational climate of life without levels. Each unit of study in the syllabus includes suggested assessment foci. These combine the skills and qualities needed with the specific subject knowledge and understanding from religion and belief, to ensure that pupils learn and progress within the subject. These can be changed and developed to suit the schemes of work that schools create from the syllabus but they provide a starting point. This will enable teachers to measure progress at each key stage. There is still development work to be done within the area of assessment in RE; the Agreed Syllabus provides a workable model for assessment in the subject, which should support assessment policies that are in place in Wigan schools. Further assessment guidance will be included in the support materials that will accompany the syllabus.

The format of the Wigan Agreed Syllabus

The format of the syllabus has changed as a direct result of requests from teachers. The syllabus, however, retains its flexibility and can be adapted and developed to ensure that it is personalised to the needs and abilities of pupils studying the subject and the different contexts in which it is being delivered.

The main aim of changing the format was to ensure that this syllabus is more practical and accessible for teachers to use. The syllabus outlines suggested teaching and learning activities within a unit, which can be used to deliver the content and meet the learning objectives. This should ensure that non-specialist staff delivering the subject have a solid foundation on which to deliver good quality RE. These are suggested activities and it is hoped that teachers will develop and adapt them to deliver the best possible RE to pupils in their schools. The team have included the good practice in Wigan schools that teachers have shared.

'Pupils should learn about...' and 'Pupils should be taught to...' is the language used in the National Curriculum and refers firstly to the content and secondly to the learning outcomes, which in the syllabus are referred to as 'Assessment Focus'. The 'Assessment Focus' should be used as a starting point to measure progress in RE in each unit of study.

There is also reference made to SMSC within the units of study so that teachers can reflect this important aspect of the National Curriculum in their planning. Again, it is not fully inclusive of all links and ideas but gives a starting point or focus for further development.

There is also reference made to 'Resources' which are listed to support the delivery of the units. This includes many imaginative resources that are available to support learning. There are additional resources available to support the delivery of the syllabus, including Wiltshire resources, to which Wigan schools have access.

The unique contribution of RE

Religious Education is a challenging, academic subject, which has been the focus of study at university for decades. It challenges pupils to analyse, interpret, evaluate and reflect upon issues of truth, belief, faith and ethics. It enables the consideration of a variety of viewpoints and beliefs both religious and non-religious. It equips pupils to ask perceptive questions, and allows them to explore what is right and wrong and investigate a range of moral issues that affect our society today. It ensures that pupils gain knowledge and understanding of the main beliefs, teachings and features of Christianity and other major religious traditions, and realise the impact and influence these beliefs have in a person's daily life. It allows greater understanding of other cultures and belief systems, increasing tolerance, overcoming prejudice and discrimination and celebrating diversity in society. It allows opportunities for personal reflection and affords pupils the opportunity to explore their own spirituality and sense of identity and belonging. RE prepares pupils for adult life by allowing them a greater understanding of people, their culture, beliefs and traditions and enables them to make sense of the complex world in which we live.

Purpose of study

The purpose of study is as outlined in the RE Review 2013:

'Religious Education contributes dynamically to children and young people's education in schools by provoking challenging questions about meaning and purpose in life, beliefs about God, ultimate reality, issues of right and wrong and what it means to be human. In RE they learn about and from religions and worldviews in local, national and global contexts, to discover, explore and consider different answers to these questions. They learn to weigh up the value of wisdom from different sources, to develop and express their insights in response, and to agree or disagree respectfully. Teaching therefore should equip pupils with systematic knowledge and understanding of a range of religions and worldviews, enabling them to develop their ideas, values and identities. It should develop in pupils an aptitude for dialogue so that they can participate positively in our society with its diverse religions and worldviews. Pupils should gain and deploy the skills needed to understand, interpret and evaluate texts, sources of wisdom and authority and other evidence. They learn to articulate clearly and coherently their personal beliefs, ideas, values and experiences while respecting the right of others to differ.'

A Review of Religious Education in England. The Religious Education Council of England and Wales. October 2013 pg. 14-15.

The phrase 'religions and worldviews' is used in this document to refer to Christianity, other principal religions represented in Britain, smaller religious communities and non-religious worldviews such as Humanism. The phrase is meant to be inclusive, and its precise meaning depends on the context in which it occurs, eg in terms of belief, practice or identity.

Aims of RE

The aims for RE are as outlined in the RE Review 2013

The curriculum for RE aims to ensure that all pupils:

A. Know about and understand a range of religions and worldviews, so that they can:

- describe, explain and analyse beliefs and practices, recognising the diversity which exists within and between communities and amongst individuals;
- identify, investigate and respond to questions posed, and responses offered by some of the sources of wisdom found in religions and worldviews;
- appreciate and appraise the nature, significance and impact of different ways of life and ways of expressing meaning.

B. Express ideas and insights about the nature, significance and impact of religions and worldviews, so that they can:

- explain reasonably their ideas about how beliefs, practices and forms of expression influence individuals and communities;
- express with increasing discernment their personal reflections and critical responses to questions and teachings about identity, diversity, meaning and value, including ethical issues;
- appreciate and appraise varied dimensions of religion or a worldview.

C. Gain and deploy the skills needed to engage seriously with religions and worldviews, so that they can:

- find out about and investigate key concepts and questions of belonging, meaning, purpose and truth, responding creatively;
- enquire into what enables different individuals and communities to live together respectfully for the wellbeing of all;
- articulate beliefs, values and commitments clearly in order to explain why they may be important in their own and other people's lives.

A Review of Religious Education in England. The Religious Education Council of England and Wales. October 2013
pg. 14-15.

The sources of wisdom found in religions and worldviews will include the key texts, the teachings of key leaders, and key thinkers from different traditions and communities./The RE programme of study usually refers to 'religions and worldviews' to describe the field of enquiry. Here, however, the aim is to consider religion and belief itself as a phenomenon, which has both positive and negative features, and is open to many interpretations: in this aspect of the aims, pupils are to engage with the concept of religion and non-religious belief, not merely with individual examples, and similar critiques should apply to both.

Spiritual, Moral, Social and Cultural Development

Spiritual, moral, social and cultural development is recognised as being of fundamental importance in the education of all pupils. In this respect, Religious Education has a significant part to play. SMSC should not just be the focus of RE, but needs to underpin and be visible in the delivery of all subjects and be apparent in all aspects of school life.

It cannot be measured in terms of attainment targets but through the many opportunities for learning that a school and its curriculum provides.

Spiritual Development

Pupils' spiritual development involves the growth of their sense of self, their unique potential, their understanding of their strengths and weaknesses, and their will to achieve. As their curiosity about themselves and their place in the world increases, they try to answer for themselves some of life's fundamental questions. They develop the knowledge, skills, understanding, qualities and attitudes they need to foster their own inner lives and non-material wellbeing. (Education Act 2002)

In practice, spiritual development is about creativity, imagination, emotions, amazement, awe, wonder, curiosity and questioning about the world and our place within it. It is about developing us as unique individuals, being able to understand ourselves and our feelings. It is about exploring the spiritual dimension of life.

Moral Development

Pupils' moral development involves pupils acquiring an understanding of the difference between right and wrong and of moral conflict, a concern for others and the will to do what is right. Pupils are able and willing to reflect on the consequences of their actions and learn what it means to forgive themselves and others. They develop the knowledge, skills and understanding, qualities and attitudes they need in order to make responsible moral decisions and act on them. (Education Act 2002)

Moral development in practice means showing respect for others and for their learning environment, developing knowledge of the difference between right and wrong. In the classroom, discussions on moral and ethical issues should encourage pupils to be able to listen to a variety of different viewpoints.

Social Development

Pupils' social development involves pupils acquiring an understanding of the responsibilities and rights of being members of families and communities (local, national and global), and an ability to relate to others and to work with others for the common good. They display a sense of belonging and an increasing willingness to participate. They develop the knowledge, skills, understanding, qualities and attitudes they need to make an active contribution to the democratic process in each of their communities. (Education Act 2002)

In practice, social development promotes learning about different communities, religious and secular, and the impact of belief on their lifestyle and practices. Social development means understanding yourself as a unique individual within a social setting and learning what it means to belong.

Cultural Development

Pupils' cultural development involves pupils acquiring an understanding of cultural traditions and ability to appreciate and respond to a variety of aesthetic experiences. Pupils develop respect for their own culture and that of others, and a curiosity and acceptance of diversity. They develop the knowledge, skills, understanding, qualities and attitudes they need to understand, appreciate their culture and the culture of others. They also explore their own contribution in relation to cultural development both locally, nationally and globally. (Education Act 2002)

In practice, cultural development is apparent in the pupils' knowledge, understanding of their own, and other cultures. Religion and culture are intertwined in many communities around the world. When studying religious traditions, beliefs and practices, pupils are developing their cultural understanding of the world in which they live. They can be given the opportunity to explore other cultures and traditions through music, literature, dance, religious studies and celebrations.

Curriculum time for Religious Studies

To ensure that the aims and expected standards of the syllabus are delivered effectively it is the recommendation of SACRE that a minimum of 5% of curriculum time is designated for the effective delivery of Religious Education. This is in line with current guidance. RE is a core subject of the curriculum for all pupils.

Schools are therefore expected to allocate a minimum:

EYFS (Reception Year): 36 hours of curriculum time per year.

KS1: 36 hours of curriculum time per year.

KS2: 45 hours of curriculum time per year.

KS3: 45 hours of curriculum time per year.

KS4: 5% of curriculum time or 72 hours over the key stage.

KS5: Allocation of time for RE for all should be clearly identifiable.

It is the recommendation that pupils following an accredited course in Religious Education are given the specified hours recommended by the Examination Board for the effective delivery of the specification they are studying.

The changes and expectations of the new GCSE syllabi for RE will mean that greater depth of study will be needed in all key stages. Schools therefore should consider increasing the curriculum time allocation for RE to enable pupils to develop the knowledge, understanding and skills needed for the higher-level study of the subject. This would ensure parity afforded to other examination subjects with similar expectations and ensure that pupils are fully prepared to meet the expected levels of progress at GCSE level and beyond.

Curriculum time must be clearly identifiable for the teaching of Religious Education. The time allocation must be distinct from the time schools allocate to Collective Worship or to other subjects such as PSHE and Citizenship.

Schools which allocate sufficient curriculum time to the teaching of RE will enable their pupils to achieve the standards set out in this syllabus and at examination level.

Legal Requirements

RE is a statutory subject and forms part of the National Curriculum entitlement.

RE should be provided for all registered pupils in state-funded schools, except those withdrawn by their parents. RE should be taught to pupils in Reception classes, but is not statutory for pupils below school age who attend nursery schools. RE provision should also be made for all sixth form pupils, although it is not a requirement for pupils who attend sixth form colleges. Special Schools are also required to make provision for RE, as far as is practical.

'Religious Education should be provided for all registered pupils except for those withdrawn at the request of their parents. (S 71 SSFA 1998). This will include children in Reception classes as well as Post 16 students (but not those at Sixth Form colleges). Special schools should comply as far as is practicable. 1'

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus is a statutory syllabus and outlines what should be taught in RE to pupils in state-funded schools within the Wigan Borough. The syllabus is locally determined by the Wigan Standing Advisory Council for Religious Education (SACRE) in consultation with RE teachers and is authorised by the Local Authority.

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus reflects the fact that 'the religious traditions in Great Britain are in the main Christian, while taking account of the teaching and practices of other principal religions represented in Great Britain.' (Education Act 1996.)

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus does reflect this emphasis within the breadth of study but also takes into account other principal religious traditions represented in the UK which according to the most current census information records Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism, Sikhism and Judaism as the other principal religions represented. The syllabus also reflects diversity of practice within religious traditions. It is important therefore when developing schemes of work from the syllabus that this diversity is recognised. In the study of RE, there has to be consideration and exploration of worldviews which are not religious. The syllabus refers to religious and non-religious views within the breadth of study. These are often referred to as teachings and viewpoints from 'religion and belief'.

1 School Standards and Framework Act 1998, Schedule 19; Education Act 2002, section 80. S 71 SSFA 1998

(The Education (Special Educational Needs) (England) (Consolidation) (Amendment) Regulations 2006 Regulation 5A)

The Wigan Agreed Syllabus should be taught in:

Community Schools

Foundation and Voluntary Controlled Schools.

Voluntary Aided Schools with a religious character must make provision for RE as determined by the governors in accordance with their trust deed. They can also adopt the Agreed Syllabus if they choose to.

Academies and Free Schools are contractually required, through the terms of their funding, to make provision for the teaching of RE. Academies without a religious character are advised to follow the Wigan Agreed Syllabus. Academies with a religious character can choose to follow the Wigan Agreed Syllabus or their own denominational or diocesan syllabus, if one is available. Academies are also free to adopt a different Agreed Syllabus with the permission of the Wigan SACRE or devise their own RE curriculum, within specified guidelines.

'Every state funded school must offer a curriculum which is balanced and broadly based, and which promotes the spiritual, moral, cultural, social, mental and physical development of pupils and prepares pupils at the school for the opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of life in modern Britain.'¹

Withdrawal from Religious Education lessons

In the Education Act 1988, parents/carers may withdraw their children from RE if they wish. Parents can request that a pupil be wholly or partly excused from RE and the school must comply. Parents are not obliged to state their reasons for seeking withdrawal. Teachers who do not wish to participate in or deliver RE lessons also have a right of withdrawal. Schools are responsible for the supervision of any child withdrawn by its parents/carers from RE. A pupil may, if the parent/carer requests this, be withdrawn from school premises to receive RE elsewhere, so long as the LEA is satisfied that this will not interfere with the child's attendance at school other than at the beginning or end of any school session.²

A National Curriculum

It is important that the Agreed Syllabus for RE reflects the new standards laid out in the national curriculum.

The national curriculum states that:

Every state-funded school must offer a curriculum, which is balanced and broadly based, and which:

- promotes the spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development of pupils at the school and of society, and
 - prepares pupils at the school for the opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of later life.
- and

All state schools...must teach religious education... All schools must publish their curriculum by subject and academic year online. 1

The national curriculum gives guidance on aspects of learning and expectations of all subjects. These expectations are reflected in the Wigan Agreed Syllabus. This will ensure parity with other subjects in the national curriculum. The language used throughout the programme of study reflects the language of the national curriculum. The guidance on language and literacy development in the national curriculum should be followed and be reflected in all schemes of work emanating from the programmes of study in the Wigan Agreed Syllabus. Guidance on inclusion is given in the national curriculum documentation and is applicable to the RE curriculum.

¹The national curriculum in England: Framework document', September 2013, p4

Programmes of Study

Pupils in key stages 1-3 will be expected to demonstrate progress in relation to the key assessment focus and the expectations for English and literacy development in the national curriculum.

It is a legal requirement of the Education Act 1996 that an Agreed Syllabus must:

reflect the fact that the religious traditions of Great Britain are in the main Christian, whilst taking account of the teachings and practices of other principal religions represented in Great Britain. (Education Act 1996, Ch. 56, Section 375)

Therefore, the focus of the Wigan Agreed Syllabus programmes of study is in the main Christian, taking into account the other five principal religions represented in Great Britain. The syllabus also allows for the consideration of humanist and non-religious viewpoints as well as other religious traditions and faith communities.

Early Years Foundation Stage

Early Years Foundation Stage: Programme of Study

Legal requirements

- The Early Years Foundation Stage (EYFS) sets the standards that all early years' providers must meet for learning, development and the care of children from birth to five years.
- Religious Education is statutory for all registered pupils on the school roll.
- Whilst RE is not a statutory requirement for pre-school children, it can still form a valuable part of the educational experience of children throughout the Foundation Stage.
- In Reception, RE is a compulsory requirement of the curriculum and should be taught in line with the Agreed syllabus.

Focus statement

Early childhood is the foundation on which children build the rest of their lives and early activities and experiences provide the basis for later development in all areas of learning. Religious Education aims to contribute to the spiritual, moral, social and cultural development of children by exploring religion and worldviews through special people, stories, times, places and objects. A key aspect of spiritual development is to enable children to reflect on that which is of worth and value in their lives and the lives of others. Children will also learn to appreciate that spirituality for many religious people will be linked with their belief in and relationship with God. The concept of 'specialness' in the context of religion is central to many of the units for this stage.

Religions and Beliefs

1. The study of Christianity
2. The beliefs of other principal religions and non-religious worldviews, as appropriate.

In addition to the above statutory requirements, schools should take into account the beliefs, viewpoints and ideas of children and their families. Schools may also refer to other religions or belief systems, for example, those represented in the school and local community.

Time for RE in the Foundation Stage

In schools, sufficient time must be provided for RE to enable the requirements of the Agreed Syllabus to be met. This Agreed Syllabus strongly recommends that the minimum curriculum time for enabling children to make progress in RE is 36 hours, over the course of the year. The principle of 'little but often' is valuable in the building up of children's learning in RE. This may be in the form of 10-15 minutes of teacher-led activity, with children then able to engage in independent learning related to the topic. Over the year, there should be specific planned activities based on the themes outlined. Teachers should also take any unplanned opportunities arising out of children's comments and interests. These can contribute to developing children's knowledge and understanding of religion and belief.

The contribution of Religious Education to the early learning goals

The early learning goals set out what most children should achieve by the end of the Foundation Stage. Religious Education can make an active contribution to all seven areas of learning:

Prime areas of learning:

- Communication and Language
- Physical development
- Personal, Social and Emotional Development

Specific areas of learning:

- Literacy
- Mathematics
- Understanding the World
- Expressive Arts and Design

Religious Education makes a strong contribution to the achievement of these goals, it is important that planning for RE starts from and meets the requirements of this Agreed Syllabus.

In the Foundation Stage, children's attainment in RE can be assessed in relation to the prime and specific areas of learning and development outlined above. Schools should follow the guidance contained within the (DfE, EYFS Profile Handbook 2014), when monitoring progress in this subject. Further guidance specific to RE is contained within the support materials that accompany the syllabus.

Learning experiences and opportunities in the Early Years

In planning and guiding children's activities, practitioners should consider the different ways that children learn and reflect these in their practice. Three characteristics of effective teaching and learning are:

- playing and exploring
- active learning
- creating and thinking

These should form the basis of teaching and learning activities designed to deliver the programme of study for RE.

Children should be provided with the opportunities in RE to:

- listen to and talk about appropriate stories which engage children
- directly experience religion: Engage with artefacts, visit places of worship (with a focus on feelings and symbols), listen and respond to visitors from faith communities
- know and use religious words e.g. God, Bible, synagogue, church, prayer
- use all five senses: Smell (e.g. incense); taste (e.g. special foods) sight and touch (e.g. religious artefacts); hearing (e.g. chants, hymns, prayers, bells)
- make and do: festive food, role-play, dance, dress up etc.
- reflect in times of quiet and stillness
- share their own beliefs, values and ideas
- talk about their feelings and experiences
- use their imagination and curiosity to develop their appreciation and wonder of the world in which they live
- use ICT to explore religious beliefs as practised in the local and wider community.

Early Years Foundation Stage themes and outcomes for Religious Education

During the Early Years Foundation Stage, children begin to explore religion and belief in terms of special people, stories, times, places and objects.

The units are designed to be taught thematically, drawing on material from Christianity and at least one other religion. In planning how these are to be taught, practitioners should try to keep a balance between hearing and exploring religious stories and practices and helping children reflect on their own feelings and ideas arising from these. Teaching and learning activities in RE at EYFS should incorporate and reflect the seven areas of learning.

Whilst the unit on Special Times can be taught discretely, it is more likely to be encountered on a seasonal basis. If these occasions are taught annually, it is important to co-ordinate planning with KS1 to ensure continuity and progression.

The following grid aims to help EYFS practitioners to identify the specific RE learning needed to provide a good foundation for further study.

Key Stage 1

Key Stage 1: Programme of Study

The Key Stage 1 programme of study contains six units in each year, with an enquiry-based focus. The unit titles are written as questions to reflect the enquiry focus of the Agreed Syllabus. The units are set out with clear objectives and suggested content. Included in the programme of study are suggested teaching and learning activities that give ideas for how the unit of study could be delivered. These are flexible and teachers may wish to adapt certain activities dependent upon the needs of their class or the context in which they teach. They are not prescriptive and it is hoped that teachers will use these and the resources that support them as a foundation for developing their own schemes of work. Included in the programme of study are learning outcomes, which are referred to as, 'Assessment Focus.' These can also be developed and extended but give schools a starting point and focus for assessment in the units. The programmes of study refers to SMSC, these links give a suggested focus but are not exhaustive. The order of the units should be taught as specified, to ensure that key units are covered at particular times of the year as appropriate. There is also a wide variety of resources available to aid the delivery of the units of work.

Key Stage 2

Key Stage 2: Programme of Study

The Key Stage 2 programme of study contains six units in each year, which have an enquiry focus. The Unit titles are written as questions to reflect the enquiry focus of the Agreed Syllabus. The units are set out with clear objectives and suggested content. Included in the programme of study are suggested teaching and learning activities that give ideas for how the unit of study could be delivered. These are flexible and teachers may wish to adapt certain activities dependent upon the needs of their class or the context in which they teach. They are not prescriptive and it is hoped that teachers will use these and the resources that support them as a foundation for developing their own schemes of work. Included in the programme of study are learning outcomes, which are referred to as 'Assessment Focus'. These can also be developed and extended, but give schools a starting point and focus for assessment in the units. Assessment foci should reflect the key skill areas for development in RE. The programmes of study also refer to SMSC; these links give a suggested focus, which is by no means exhaustive. The order of the units should be taught as specified, to ensure that key units are covered at particular times of the year. There is also a wide variety of resources available to aid the delivery of the units of work.

Pupils should explore a variety of ultimate questions from a variety of religious and non-religious perspectives, evaluating arguments and formulating their own reasoned opinions while considering the viewpoints of others sensitively and respectfully. Pupils at Key Stage 3 should push their knowledge and understanding of religion to a higher level. It is important that teachers build on the foundations of knowledge and understanding in respect of religious traditions and their practices but also explore some of the challenges and issues that religion faces in society today.

Within the units that relate to a specific religious tradition there should be an open exploration and recognition of diversity within and between faith communities.

The first unit to be delivered at Key Stage 3 is 'What are the features of religious communities?' This provides continuity with and progression from Key Stage 2 and should be taught as the Introductory Unit. This will enable teachers to assess and build on prior learning at Key Stage 1 & 2. The delivery of the other units in the programme of study at Key Stage 3 is flexible. The Unit titles are written as questions to reflect the enquiry nature and focus of the Agreed syllabus. The study of Christianity remains a priority and should be studied in each of the three years. The emphasis is on quality of learning not quantity and therefore it is recommended that schools study a minimum of three religious traditions in depth, one of which must be Christianity. Pupils should study a minimum of ten out of the thirteen modules available; this should be determined by the teaching and learning context of the School. Key stage 3 Units specify learning outcomes in relation to the content of the Unit; these are termed Assessment focus and should be used as a way of measuring progress. The breadth of content allows for a wider range of assessment foci and pupil achievements. Ideally, schools should undertake an assessment relating to each unit of study, which can be summative or formative.

Schools may be creative in the delivery of the units combining elements of each unit to create more challenging and interesting focuses of study. If there are restrictions on curriculum time, affecting the delivery of the programme of study, such as a two-year Key Stage 3 then the syllabus will need to be adapted. Teachers need to make sure that all pupils have the necessary knowledge and understanding of religious traditions and worldviews and the skills needed to progress to a more detailed and challenging level of study at Key Stage 4.

Religious Studies pupils should demonstrate creativity and reflection in their work.

SPAG

There is also an expectation in the area of written and verbal communication; that pupils should be able to communicate effectively. Therefore, a certain level is to be reached in terms of spelling, punctuation and grammar specific to Religious Education.

Key Stage 4 RE and RE 16-19

Pupils should build on their prior learning and should extend and deepen their knowledge of religion and worldviews, reflecting local, national and global contexts.

Pupils at Key Stage 4 and 5 who do not opt to study the subject and sit a formal examination at GCSE/GCE level should be given the opportunity to follow an accredited course in Religious Studies, such as those available from the Examination Boards.

Assessing pupil progress and achievement in RE

All schools have to follow a set of core principles relating to assessment set out by the DFE. They determine that assessment should:

Set out steps so that pupils reach or exceed end of Key Stage expectations in the new National curriculum.

Enable teachers to measure whether pupils are on track to meet the end of Key Stage expectations.

Enable teachers to pin point the aspects of the curriculum in which pupils are falling behind, and recognise exceptional performance.

Support teachers planning for all pupils.

Enable the teacher to report regularly to parents and, where pupils move, to other schools, providing clear information about each pupil's strengths and weaknesses and progress towards the end of key stage expectation.

The ultimate aim of the Wigan Agreed syllabus is to ensure that all pupils make significant progress whatever their ability. That pupils follow an academically challenging RE programme of study that will ensure that pupils make measurable progress not just in terms of knowledge and understanding but in the skills needed to engage with RE at examination level and beyond. The purpose of assessment in RE is to determine pupil progress against specified learning outcomes. To use assessment as a way to monitor and measure how pupils can improve and develop their skills in RE and deepen their subject knowledge and understanding in relation to the programme of study.

In the National Curriculum, it states that by the end of each key stage, pupils are expected to know, apply and understand the matters, skills and processes specified in the relevant programme of study. This attainment target applies to all subjects in the National Curriculum 2013.

It is therefore important that we are clear in terms of the purpose of assessment in RE and what we are assessing. A great deal of work has been done by the RE community in recent years to improve the way in which we measure progress in RE. There is still work to do in this area and no one claim to have the definitive answer but there is some good practice out there that has been used to give advice and direction in terms of assessment in this syllabus.

Some key messages are that there is a place for summative assessment but assessment that forms part of the programme of study is more effective in ensuring a timely, personalised approach to assessment that will ensure that the feedback given to pupils is effective in moving

There needs to be a dialogue around progress, achievement and attainment in RE; a dialogue for learning that involves the teacher, pupil and parents. This dialogue will focus on determining the depth of knowledge and understanding demonstrated by the pupil in RE and on the development of skills required to make progress in the subject. This knowledge and understanding and the skills that need to be developed are outlined in the learning outcomes of the programme of study. The assessment language of 'Emerging', 'Expected' and 'Exceeding' in relation to the learning outcomes could be used as an effective way of demonstrating progress. Key to this dialogue is high quality feedback from the teacher as to progress made and things achieved and areas for focus and development. This feedback will be personalised for each individual pupil, to ensure that each pupil makes or exceeds the expected level of progress across each stage of his or her learning. Pupils should no longer talk about their progress in relation to levels but in terms of what they are doing well and what they need to work on to make further progress in their learning journey.

When asked about their progress in RE a pupil should be able to say:

'I am making expected progress. I have a good knowledge and understanding of Christianity but I know I need to research into the beliefs and practices of Judaism more, so that my subject knowledge and understanding of Judaism increases. I also need to develop my religious literacy skills by joining in more with class discussion on religious issues and by using more religious key words and ideas in my work. I need to develop my evaluation skills by referring to arguments from religion and belief in my answers.'

Or

'I can identify religious clothing from different religions but I need to explain the reasons why these clothes are worn. I am good at giving my opinion on a religious issue but I need to improve by explaining why I have this opinion.'

It is a directive of SACRE that RE Departments follow the school policy of assessment and reporting pupil progress in place in their school. The assessment guidance outlined in this document should be easily adapted to enable this.

Schools still need to demonstrate the progress made by pupils. It is still a requirement that schools report to parents the attainment and progress of pupils in Religious Education at the end of each year, in line with national requirements.

In the resource materials, which will accompany the syllabus there are some models for assessing pupil progress that could be used in Wigan schools.

Evidence of Progress against Targets.

It is also important that there is evidence of pupil progress not only in terms of data and assessments but also when scrutinising pupils work. Pupils work should demonstrate progress over time and should contain evidence of pupils acting on feedback to make progress. The teacher needs to have a clear plan of how pupils can achieve and develop their knowledge, understanding and skills in Religious Studies. This should inform all planning and work completed by pupils.

Reporting to Parents

Schools still need to demonstrate the progress made by students in their subjects. It is still a requirement that schools report to parents the attainment and progress of pupils in Religious Education at the end of each year, in line with national requirements.

In reporting to parents a pupil's progress in Religious Studies, reference should be made to knowledge and understanding related to the relevant learning outcomes in the programme of study and with reference to the skills listed above. It should outline what the pupil has achieved and what they need to do to progress further. It should also adhere to the individual school's policy for reporting to parents.

Self -Evaluation and Religious Education

RE Departments should self-evaluate their RE provision and work in light of the new syllabus. When completing a Self-Evaluation exercise it is worth starting with a SWOT analysis, highlighting strengths and weaknesses. Depending on the context of the school reference should be made to Ofsted criteria and expectations and the RE Review in England and Wales 2013. Another self-evaluation tool available is the RE Quality Mark documentation. It is important to self-evaluate, as this will inform future planning and development of the subject.

Reporting to SACRE

Schools will be required to submit information to SACRE as and when requested relating to pupil progress and curriculum provision.
